Bye Bye Red Foxes!

The orphaned fox kits that came to our center in April are now leaving for the foothills! Soon they will enjoy a large, outdoor pen that allows them to wander out into the surrounding woods. This helps them learn how to hunt on their own. After a few weeks, they will likely not return to the enclosure after they find a perfect spot for their own wild den. Good luck, foxes!

animals at Greenwood 2021

We are barely over halfway through the year, and Greenwood already has cared for more than 2,200 animals!

1,147 birds

487 waterfowl & shorebirds

74 raccoons

188 squirrels

and several other types of mammals.

Even just partway through the busy season, we have 272 more birds than last year. With Wild Bird Rehab in Denver closed, we have been inundated. We're currently caring for more than 500 animals on-site.

Wildlife Stories

Through their scanner, Boulder City police officers heard "man carrying an injured duck". When they arrived at the scene, they found the rescuer had saved this baby Wood Duck after it had nearly been squished by cars near the intersection of Broadway and Canyon.

The man described the scene. A duckling was spotted running through traffic. As cars zoomed by, the delicate chick was whipped by the wind, and it tumbled into another lane. The brave rescuer scrambled to scoop the baby up. Upon first glance, the duckling didn't seem injured, although surely it was shaken from this traumatic event.

Officers responded and arranged for the youngster to be taken to our Center. Our staff did an evaluation and discovered the baby to be in good health. Luckily for this tyke, we already had four other ducklings

A woman that works at the Greenwood Thrift Shop & Consignment Gallery had amazing success reuniting a family of American Robins! Four babies were snug in a nest on her back pergola. When she came home from work one day, she found the nest had fallen onto the deck. Three of the babies were hopping around, looking ready to fledge. The fourth seemed like a runt. It was immobile but still breathing. The woman figured the baby wouldn't survive long, and she could at least make it comfortable during its last moments. She put the nestling in the nest and placed it in a box for safety. Over the course of the next few hours, the runt began to show signs of recovery. In the morning, the rescuer was happily surprised to find the baby much more alert. When she called Greenwood, our staff informed her that a few hungry chirps from the baby would likely lure mom near. Within the hour, the mama robin had located her wayward chick and started feeding her. Later in the week, the baby hopped out of the nest and explored the backyard, while mom followed around her curious fledgling. All had ended well for this robin family!
