Greenwood's Trained Staff Feed a Baby Deer Mouse

Wildlife Stories

This fox kit and his sibling were without mom for several days. Their caring rescuer followed all of the advice we gave them about attempting to reunite the babies with mom. Once it was determined that mom would not return, we gave the rescuer instructions on how to carefully contain the kits so that there was no direct human contact.

After they were assessed at Greenwood and stabilized, they were transferred to a licensed rehabilitator near Colorado Springs who was already rehabilitating two fox kits similar in size. Once they are old enough, the foxes will all be released in a pack-sized group (4-6 foxes).

This handsome male shoveler was rescued from the Denver Zoo.

DID YOU KNOW?

Among North America's duck species, Northern Shovelers trail only Mallards and Blue-winged Teals in overall abundance.

Northern Shovelers are known to engage in elaborate courtship behaviors. Click here to watch a video of the mating "dance". This behavior most often occurs in January. During breeding season, males are very territorial and will passionately defend their grounds and partners from competitors.
