Wildlife Stories

Most people go to the chiropractor expecting to get their spine adjusted. Well this is the story of a woman who went to the chiropractor and ended up with an orphaned chipmunk. Since the little animal was observed for a long time without his mom, we knew he needed to come to Greenwood. The chiropractor had a busy day stacked with appointments and wasn't sure how he could get it to us. Fortunately, one of the patients who was there at the time lived in Lyons and offered to drive the orphan to us.

Once he arrived, we immediately administered fluids since he was pretty dehydrated. He spent a couple of weeks in our care until he was ready to survive in the wild on his own. He was released into an amazing habitat in the Boulder foothills.

Many of the wildlife lovers in our state have a long-standing relationship with Greenwood, as was the case with the woman who rescued this orphaned mink. Her connection to us goes all the way back to when she was in 4th grade and rescued a cormorant that was tangled in fishing line.

When she spotted this mink near the road, she jumped out of the car to move the animal out of the path of danger. Sadly, she immediately noticed other minks, including a larger one, that had been hit by a car. Assuming the bigger animal had to be the mother, the woman carefully scooped up the orphan with her jacket. Fortunately, she knew just whom to contact! After the mink's first few days at Greenwood, she was moved to an outdoor enclosure with a pool, where she has become quite a frequent swimmer. Needless to say, she's on her way to a healthy and happy release.
