Watch Greenwood on CBS 4

Greenwood was recently featured on CBS 4 Denver evening news for helping spread the word about items needed by the wildlife rehabilitators in Australia. NOTE: We are not directly involved in efforts to collect supplies or supply patterns for crafted items.

PLEASE visit facebook.com/ARFSNCrafts for FAQs, patterns, and more instead of contacting Greenwood for information. There was a tremendous response to our post spreading awareness, and we were humbled by the incredible reaction from our community.

A Black-tailed Prairie Dog Backs it on Up.
The story of the prairie dog from the video...

Greenwood recently received a Black-tailed Prairie Dog from Louisville who had been poisoned. A pest control company had been brought in to remove the animals. The surrounding neighbors were outraged by this inhumane and unnecessary approach to the local prairie dog colony. They immediately took action to save the beloved animals by renting a shop vacuum to remove the poison from the holes. Unfortunately, some of the prairie dogs had already ingested the poison, including a female who was brought to Greenwood. She was in rough shape when she arrived at the center. As part of her treatment, she received regular supplements of Vitamin K. Slowly but surely, she regained her appetite, and her health started to improve. She was under Greenwood’s delicate care and observation for just under two weeks before being successfully released back into the wild last week.

This beautiful Ring-necked Duck was brought to Greenwood all the way from Thornton by a volunteer from Colorado Parks & Wildlife. The bird was found by Animal Control with an injury on his back, which might’ve been the result of an attack. When he first arrived, we weren’t sure if he would make it. He seemed lethargic, was clearly in shock, and couldn’t lift his head.

He quickly improved in our care and was ready to be moved to outside caging within a week of his arrival. Once he was placed in the bigger enclosure, he immediately spread his wings and flew. The duck was ready to return to the wild! He was released on the same day next to a beautiful pond with open water. He took off straight away in the direction he originally came from.
