Vote for Greenwood Wildlife in Best of Boulder!

It's that time of the year where YOU get to vote for the best organizations and businesses in Boulder County. Keep Greenwood Wildlife Rehabilitation Center in mind when voting for "Nonprofit" organizations. Please write in Greenwood Thrift Shop & Consignment Gallery when voting for the "Used Clothing" and "Furniture" categories. Our stores are a huge fundraising platform for Greenwood patients. Voting ends March 31, so start today!

Spring Babies are Coming!

Spring is the time when baby animals start being born. Sometimes good meaning folks will bring in infant squirrels thinking they might be abandoned. It is very important to give mama the chance to reunite with her young. If you think you've found orphaned squirrels, read more here or call 303-823-8455. Absolutely do not feed baby squirrels! It could do more harm than good.

With orphaned squirrels starting to arrive, and as we prepare for baby birds, we need supplies to take care of them properly. To help us collect these items, check out our list of needs. We accept many common items that you can drop off at our Thrift & Consignment stores or our Rehabilitation Center.

A Spotted Skunk Gets a Second Chance at Life

Wildlife Stories

A grebe was found wandering around a gas station far from any bodies of water when a caring citizen spotted him.

It was a cold and foggy evening when Neila found the bird, so she had to keep him overnight until Greenwood opened the next morning. The grebe got the perfect dose of what he needed, because the next day, after his checkup at Greenwood, this feisty guy was freed to return back to the wild.

DID YOU KNOW?

Facts about Black-Tailed Prairie Dogs:

Prairie dog tunnels do a great job at aerating soil and mixing the nutrients from further down in the ground. They are an essential part of our ecosystem because they are food to many animals, and they often rejuvenate stagnant prairie ecosystems.

Prairie dogs got their name because settlers heard their warning barks as they rode throughout the prairie.
