WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO PRACTICE COMPASSION?

Merriam-Webster defines compassion as “sympathetic consciousness of others’ distress together with a desire to alleviate it.” At Greenwood, we take compassion one step further. We put selfish needs and our own desires completely aside. Our only consideration is what is best for the animal. We take whatever steps necessary to provide the optimal outcome for wildlife. As a result, our work can be extremely emotional at times. How do we cope with these feelings? By reminding ourselves of the important purpose our work serves in the community.

Our staff and volunteers aren’t the only ones who demonstrate this type of compassion. We rely on you, our supporters, and the caring rescuers who put their trust in us, our work, and our mission of releasing wild animals back into nature.

One such rescuer, a young animal lover named Ella, was with her mother in downtown Estes Park when she came across a male Mallard. He was missing a lot of the beautiful, emerald green feathers from the back of his head and a large scab covered that area. She called Greenwood for advice. It seemed clear he needed to be rescued, so we walked her through that process.

The duck evaded Ella’s attempts to contain him. A group of onlookers started to gather to watch. Finally, the crowd helped herd the duck far enough from the other ducks for Ella and her mother to throw a blanket over him. Shortly after, they brought him to Greenwood.

Ella visited the center several times to check on the duck’s status. His condition continued to improve, the wound healed substantially, and he was happily released after a month in our care. During one of her visits, Ella professed that she would have loved to keep him as a pet, but she knew better. We explained the legal issues and ethics of keeping wildlife as pets, but she felt sure the duck could have been domesticated. In spite of her personal desires, though, Ella demonstrated selfless compassion by doing what was best for the animal.

Your own compassion allows us to exist. Your support of our mission is a perfect example of altruism. Thank you for believing in us and the orphaned and injured wildlife in our care!
DEAR FRIENDS,

Thank you for your amazing support in 2018! With your help, we were able to care for more than 3,600 mammals, birds, and waterfowl. This is an increase of 200 animals compared to the previous year and 1,355 over five years ago.

While we take in more patients each year, we also support smaller organizations and home rehabilitators. I was honored to be chosen as Treasurer of the Colorado Nongame Conservation and Wildlife Restoration Board. It’s exciting that, for the first time in our state’s history, tax refund monies have been dispersed to support rehabilitation.

Greenwood opted out of receiving funds from this initiative. It is so much more impactful to smaller rehabilitators and will help keep them alive and thriving. Close to $17,000 in grants ranging from $1,000 - $3,000 were distributed to eight wonderful organizations. Please support this effort by donating all or part of your state tax refund. We would love to have more money to give next year!

And of course, Greenwood still needs your help. If we all work together, we can keep wildlife rehabilitation flourishing in Colorado.

The many positive outcomes for the wildlife we care for inspire us to continue working so hard, along with knowing we have your continuing support. Thank you again for all that you do!

Sincerely,

Linda Tyler

ANIMAL TALES

A Peaceful Porcupine
Greenwood gets some of the most unique animals during the winter months. That was definitely the case when we got the call about an injured porcupine in Summit County that had likely been hit by a car and was barely moving. A caring Animal Control Officer from Breckenridge safely transported him more than two hours to our center in Lyons. When the porcupine arrived, he was able to walk; but he clearly had serious injuries. Since he was a big animal and not easily transportable, our volunteer veterinarian promptly found someone with a mobile X-ray machine to come to the center. The results showed the porcupine’s injuries were too severe for him to ever be released into the wild. He was euthanized in a peaceful setting, putting an end to his pain.

The Grateful Goose
Have you ever heard of a Cackling Goose? They look very similar to Canada Geese but are significantly smaller.

This winter, a Cackling Goose arrived at Greenwood with its wing covered in frozen blood that had soaked into the feathers. Our experienced staff and volunteers spent over 30 minutes cleaning it up well enough to see the cause of the injury. Surprisingly they found only a small wound and a couple of broken blood feathers. After some time healing at Greenwood, the goose was successfully released back into the wild!

HEALTHCARE FOR HUMMINGBIRDS? TAX CHECKOFF TO SUPPORT WILDLIFE

Wildlife lovers throughout Colorado can easily utilize the Voluntary Contributions Schedule (104CH) on their state tax forms to donate part or all of their tax refund to support the care of orphaned and injured wildlife. A portion of the contributions to the Nongame Conservation and Wildlife Restoration Fund are distributed to rehabilitationists, licensed through Colorado Parks and Wildlife, who care for these animals — often at their own expense.

This year, many rehabilitationists that we work closely with, such as Colorado Wild Rabbit Foundation and Colorado Native Bird Care and Conservation, used these funds for medical bills and diagnostic testing. Please donate and help Colorado’s wildlife!
